“The Spirituality of Deep Stewardship”

Every year of this month, the priests, bishops and the Cardinal of the Archdiocese of Toronto gather together for few days in Alliston for a spiritual study. This year’s seminar, the topic is about “Deep Stewardship: Unpacking the True Meaning of Stewardship in Light of the Pastoral Plan”.

Cardinal Thomas Collins wrote a pastoral letter on Stewardship and I would like to share with you some of the highlights of his pastoral letter.

What is a Stewardship? The term stewardship is often taken to be a code word for “tithing” or for “fundraising for religious purposes”. But stewardship is not just about money, if we do think in this way, then stewardship will become just another program. But if we think and seek deeply the real meaning of stewardship we will be able to find the profound meaning that stewardship begins with gratitude and ends with accountability. Stewardship is sometimes called “the attitude of gratitude”. We recognize that everything in life is a gift from God. We do not ultimately own anything, but are entrusted with time, talent and treasure for use during our brief passage through this life. And at the end of life, we take nothing with us, except the life which arises out of generous love.

Deep stewardship means having our priorities straight. As disciples of Christ, we must be clear about what really matters. Time, talent and treasure: these are the gifts that each of us has freely received, and which we need to use responsibly in a spirit of gratitude. If we do that, day by day until the day when we are called to account, then we will experience the joyful serenity of deep stewardship.

Thus, Cardinal Collins wants to implement this principle of stewardship in the Archdiocese and in every parish. For him, this is vital, for we will be trapped in a dead end if we become distracted by a superficial vision of stewardship, such as one focusing on money. We must be satisfied with nothing less than deep stewardship, in which each of us resolves to make generous use of the time, talent and treasure which God has entrusted to us.

Deep stewardship means individual and communal conversion, and involves living discipleship in a spirit of generosity and total engagement, as we are commissioned to do through our Baptism and Confirmation. Life is too short for us to waste it as half-hearted disciples. The attitude of joyful engagement which is stewardship for the individual needs to be reflected as well in the way in which we operate as a community.
